CEDARS-SINAI®

This dynamic and interactive three day conference will equip otolaryngologists, primary care providers, sleep specialists, and other healthcare providers with the most current clinical information, technological advances, innovative approaches, and recent guidelines to support the optimal care of patients presenting with sleep disorders and ear, nose and throat conditions.

Day One is a four hour afternoon/evening program focused on various aspects of obstructive sleep apnea, medical and surgical weight-loss therapies, utilization of dental devices, and other aspects of treating OSA and CPAP-intolerant patients. Participants will attend a working dinner and will select two of four relevant topic sessions. The day will end with a cadaver prosection demonstration of hypoglossal nerve stimulation.

Day Two offers a comprehensive exploration of sinus-center best practices. The morning session will focus on practical office-based approaches to sinus disease management and sinus surgery. Other topics to be explored include endoscopic Denker's approach for tumors of the anterior maxilla, the effect of sinus surgery on the voice, frontal drill-out with obliteration, middle turbinate management and pediatric sinus surgery. Following a working lunch, the program will update attendees on multiple aspects of eustachian tube (ET) anatomy, physiology, pathophysiology of ET dysfunction, and indications and results of ET techniques. An optional hands-on cadaver workshop will enhance skills in ET balloon dilation and other procedures.

Day Three is designed to meet the ENT needs of the primary care provider. The program agenda is divided into four sessions: Ears, Nose/Sinus, Mouth/Throat and Neck – with each session offering an in-depth review of the most important issues facing PCPs. A working lunch will encourage interaction among participants and faculty, and an afternoon Skills Lab will present a final opportunity for attendees to practice the application of acquired knowledge in an educational setting.
